Chicago freedom movement. 1965

Martin Luther King Jnr.

Martin Luther King Jr. was an African American Baptist minister and activist. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. sought to raise the public consciousness of racism, to end racial discrimination and segregation in the United States. While his goal was racial equality, King plotted out a series of smaller objectives that involved local grassroots campaigns for equal rights for African Americans.

MLK vs Malcolm X

Martin Luther King Jr. and Malcolm X were two of the most prominent African American leaders in the history of the country.

King supported a nonviolent movement for attaining equal rights for everyone.

Malcolm had a very aggressive approach towards achieving this very task.

King had no criminal record.

King advocated the idea for equality.

Summary

The civil rights movement in the 60s included boycotts such as the Montgomery bus boycott lead by Rosa parks and another great activist. In the 60s, there were higher numbers of racial discrimination compared to this current era – even though still highly present in socio – economic status. The 60s had great activists, who were popularly known all around the world. An example of these great activist were Rosa Parks, Malcolm X, and MLK. The Civil Rights movement in this current era is promoted on social media platforms this makes the movement more popular and stronger. An example of this is the Black Lives Matter [BLM] movement hashtag on all social media platforms which promoted and spread awareness of the movement. The 60s civil rights movement leaders were 100 percent dedicated and were willing to do anything for their cause or objectives an example is Malcolm X he was willing to pursue violence to attain his goals as an activist for the african American community. Something that remains the same is the marches done by protesters.
